“Jailhouse informants comprise the most deceitful and deceptive group of witnesses known to frequent the courts. They rush to testify like vultures to rotting flesh or sharks to blood. They are smooth and convincing liars. Whether they seek favors from the authorities, attention or notoriety they are in every instance completely unreliable. ... They must be recognized as a very great danger to our trial system.”

“[S]nitch cases account for 45.9% of Wrongful Convictions. That makes snitches the leading cause of wrongful convictions in U.S. capital cases.”

Anyone who has ever had a case coming up for trial that involves these unreliable and untrustworthy witnesses knows how very dangerous they are. This is intended to be a comprehensive guide to help the busy trial lawyer get a head start in dealing with the issues that arise from discovery, all the way through closing arguments, jury instructions and beyond. Many challenges remain in dealing with informant testimony. It is up to us - defense counsel - to raise them and litigate them thoroughly. Included in these materials are Federal and State law enforcement protocols; Statutes and Rules of Evidence; the major Law Review articles and Task Force Reports on Wrongful Convictions; support for excluding this type of witness; preventing the creation of this witness; presenting expert testimony regarding the unreliability of this type of witness; checklists for discovery and investigation; sample motions; actual transcripts of closings and cross examinations; models of better jury instructions and more. Everything you need to get started. See Jumpstarts for a quick beginning. We can use these materials to hopefully – ultimately – keep all of these witnesses from testifying at all; and, for at least right now, to get as much information as we need to effectively try our case. This is our mission that we must choose to accept. Let us “Make it so”.

EVIDENCE RULES and STATUTES

I have tried to collect statutes that apply to informant testimony. Illinois and Florida are excellent sources for discovery and jury instruction requests. I think even though some of the statutes are limited to death penalty cases, the reasoning supporting them applies to all cases. Please as with everything else double check to see if they still exist before referencing them. See Wrongful Conviction Causes States Task Force Recommendations Section for further support.

Florida Innocence Commission Final Report

VIIA: Informant and Jailhouse Snitches

“The Florida Supreme Court . . . finally has changed the rules of evidence. Beginning this month, prosecutors now are required to disclose both a summary of the jailhouse informant’s criminal history and just what kind of deal a snitch will be getting in return for testimony. And now, jurors will hear about prior cases that relied on testimony from that particular informant. The justices ordered new restrictions on the much abused informant testimony, because snitches, the court noted, "constitute the basis for many wrongful convictions."

Florida Amendment to Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.220 2014

Mandating detailed disclosure by the prosecutor of the use of an informant witness.

Florida Supreme Court regulates criminal informant testimony 2014

“In 2012, the Florida Innocence Commission made a series of reform recommendations in recognition of the "dangers of false informant and jailhouse snitch testimony." The Florida Supreme Court has now amended the rules of evidence to reflect those recommendations. See
In re: Amendments to Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure 3.220. The Miami Herald reported the story here: Florida's high court puts brakes on snitches' testimony.”

Mandates discovery and requires a reliability hearing: “(a) For the purposes of this Section, "informant" means someone who is purporting to testify about admissions made to him or her by the accused while incarcerated in a penal institution contemporaneously....”

Illinois State Statute Sec. 725 ILCS 5/115-21 Reliability Hearing 2003

Illinois Reliability Hearing Recommendation Sixth And Final Report Of The Capital Punishment Reform Study Committee 2010

Requires a hearing regarding reliability. Great example of the discovery that must be provided. “The court shall conduct a hearing to determine whether the testimony of the informant is reliable ...”

Texas Art. 38.075. Corroboration Of Informant Testimony Required

Title 21 United States Code (USC) Controlled Substances Act Exemptions

21 USC 862(e) exempts any individual “who cooperates or testifies with the Government” is exempt from the exclusion of federal benefits provisions that relate to drug traffickers or possessors. Can be used for discovery requests. Opens door to questions about snitches drug issues and penalty provisions the client faces.

Washington Proposed Legislation Informant Disclosure 2011

Although not passed it is a good example of what discovery, evidence and instructions should be...

“AN ACT Relating to disclosure and regulation of criminal informant evidence and testimony; and adding a new chapter to Title 10 RCW. BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON: NEW SECTION. Sec. 1. The legislature finds that evidence and testimony from criminal informants who have reason to seek leniency and other benefits from the criminal justice system are inherently suspect because a system in which criminal informants are rewarded by the state produces dangerous incentives to manufacture or fabricate evidence...”

Commonwealth v. Murphy, 448 Mass. 452; 862 N.E.2d 30; 2007

“We conclude that, where the government has entered into an "articulated agreement containing a specific benefit," or promise thereof, Commonwealth v. Reynolds, 429 Mass. 388, 394, 708 N.E.2d 658 & n.7 (1999), the recipient inmate is a government agent for purposes of the Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution and art. 12 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights even if the inmate is not directed to target a specific individual.”

Commonwealth vs. Miguel A. Marrero (and seven companion cases) 436 Mass. 488, (2002)

Mandates Model Jury Instruction. “The judge pointedly instructed the jury on the issue of testimony pursuant to a plea bargain or immunity agreement, as required by Commonwealth v. Ciampa, supra at 266, both immediately after Washington's testimony and in his final charge. The judge told the jury that "[t]he testimony of a witness under such an agreement must be considered with particular caution and care," and that the prosecutor did not have "any special knowledge of the truthfulness of her testimony." The jury's attention was clearly focused on the incentives that could have influenced Washington's testimony and they were warned that the prosecutor did not know whether Washington was telling the truth. There was no objection to the judge's instructions. The charge was complete and comprehensive, and we set it forth (with some revisions) in the Appendix of this opinion for possible use by other judges in future cases.”

Certain criminal convictions, which were largely dependent upon the credibility of an admitted accomplice who testified pursuant to a written plea agreement, were reversed by this court, where the trial judge erred in admitting the agreement in evidence without redacting repeated references to the witness's obligation to tell the truth, a reference to the witness's placement in a program for protection of his life and safety, and language that the agreement was contingent on the truth of the witness's representation that he did not shoot the victim of a homicide, and where the judge also erred in admitting testimony that the witness's attorney had signed a statement representing that the witness understood the agreement and that the attorney believed the witness had entered into the agreement freely and voluntarily. [262-263] O'CONNOR, J., with whom NOLAN and LYNCH, JJ., joined, dissenting.

At a criminal trial in which the Commonwealth's case was largely dependent upon the credibility of an alleged accomplice who testified pursuant to a written plea agreement, the judge's instructions to the jury insufficiently conveyed a need to treat the witness's testimony with caution, failed to focus adequately on the incentives that could have influenced that witness's testimony, and did not dispel any suggestion that the prosecution was vouching for the witness's truthfulness. [263-264] O'CONNOR, J., with whom NOLAN and LYNCH, JJ., joined, dissenting.

Observations for the guidance of judges in future criminal trials in which an alleged accomplice testifies pursuant to a plea agreement. [264-266]

“…an evidentiary hearing and findings of fact are required to determine whether the witness obtained the information...prior to the establishment of any agency relationship.”

"Testimony offered by a witness in exchange for the government's promise of a plea bargain or immunity should be treated with caution, lest the jury believe that the government has special knowledge of the veracity of the witness's testimony." Commonwealth v. Marrero, 436 Mass. 488, 500, 766 N.E.2d 461 (2002). (452) ... "The danger increases when the jury are informed that the validity of the agreement depends on the truthful nature of the testimony." Id. "If properly handled, however, such an agreement does not constitute improper prosecutorial vouching for the witness." Id. "In the Ciampa decision, this court set forth guidelines to be used when a witness testifies pursuant to a plea or immunity agreement that explicitly incorporates a witness's promise to testify truthfully, to minimize the possibility that the jury will believe the witness because the Commonwealth, in effect, has guaranteed the truth of the witness's testimony." Id., citing Commonwealth v. Ciampa, supra at 264-266.

In Commonwealth v. Washington, 459 Mass. 32, 44 n.21, 944 N.E.2d 98 (2011), we explained: "Where a Ciampa instruction is warranted, the following rules apply. A prosecutor may generally bring out on direct examination the fact that a witness has entered into a plea agreement and understands his obligations under it, but any attempts to bolster the witness by questions concerning his obligation to tell the truth should await redirect examination, and are appropriate only after the defendant [*455] has attempted to impeach the witness's credibility by showing the witness struck a deal with the prosecution to obtain favorable treatment. Commonwealth v. Ciampa, 406 Mass. 257, 264, 547 N.E.2d 314 (1989). A prosecutor in closing argument may then restate the witness's agreement, but commits reversible error if she 'suggests that the government has special knowledge by which it can verify the witness's testimony.' Id. at 265. To guard against an implied representation of credibility, the judge must 'specifically and forcefully tell the jury to study the witness's credibility with particular care.' Id. at 266, citing United States v. Mealy, 851 F.2d 890, 900 (7th Cir. 1988). Where the jury are aware of the witness's promise to tell the truth, the judge also should warn the jury that the government does not know whether the witness is telling the truth. . . ." Here, where Nou was granted immunity and where the prosecutor on redirect examination elicited that Nou had promised to tell the truth, we agree with the defendant that the Ciampa instruction should have been given. (455) ...

Commonwealth v. Rodwell, 394 Mass. 694, 700 (1985) Bias is never collateral.

A prosecution witness’s past cooperation with the Commonwealth, which has led to the apprehension and conviction of others and to favorable treatment of the witness, is relevant to the question of the witness’s bias, an issue that is never collateral. Commonwealth v. Marcellino, 271 Mass. 325 , 327 (1930).

We do not think you need to ask the snitch, nor have him admit at the voir dire/trial that he hoped for favorable treatment when he made the statements to the police back when. It is enough to get him to acknowledge that sometime before he gave the statement he had been stopped and accused of (for example possessing the guns and drugs).

One of the future issues is to file requests for jury instructions that incorporate the social science literature similar to the recent Commonwealth vs. Jeremy D. Gomes, 470 Mass. 352, 379 (2015).

“Held: Respondent’s statements to the informant should not have been admitted at trial. By intentionally creating a situation likely to induce respondent to make incriminating statements without the assistance of counsel, the Government violated respondent’s Sixth Amendment right to counsel. Under the facts, particularly the facts that the informant was acting under instructions as a paid informant for the Government while ostensibly no more than a fellow inmate, and that respondent was in custody and under indictment at the time, incriminating statements were "deliberately elicited" from respondent within the meaning of Massiah. Since respondent was unaware that the informant was acting for the Government, he cannot be held to have waived his right to the assistance of counsel.”

At the reliability hearing, the reviewing court should evaluate the evidence by hearing the testimony of the informant, any other relevant witness (including possibly the defendant), and any evidence bearing on the informant's credibility. The judge shall specifically consider the following factors: (1) whether the informant has received or will receive anything in exchange for testifying; (2) whether the informant has testified or offered evidence in other cases and any benefit there received; (3) the specificity of the informant’s testimony; (4) the manner in which the statement from the defendant was obtained; (5) the degree to which the statement can be independently corroborated; (6) whether the informant has changed his testimony in this case or any case; and (7) the informant's criminal history. ... ¶6 After considering the evidence, the judge should determine whether the moving party established that the informant’s testimony is more probably true than not. “The Court also considered a case wherein the State had utilized a jailhouse snitch to elicit inculpatory statements from a defendant in violation of his Sixth Amendment right to counsel ... Kansas v. Ventris, 129 S. Ct. 1841, 1845 (2009).” Although the Court allowed the informant testimony into evidence there is a good review of the arguments and literature supporting the unreliability of this testimony. (at pages 551-557.)

“In Ventris, the prosecution and the police placed an individual into the same jail cell in which Ventris was being held awaiting trial. Doser, the jailhouse snitch, was instructed to be a human listening device. Doser and Ventris engaged in conversations and Doser was able to elicit incriminating statements from Ventris. Ventris did not know that Doser was acting on behalf of the State, therefore there was no way that Ventris could have waived his Sixth Amendment right to counsel.”

PREPARATION

Discovery Preparation

Goals: Finding out the most basic information – including whether or not the prosecution intends to call an informant to testify – can be very difficult. Starting early with specific discovery requests is imperative. Most states, including Massachusetts, have general discovery obligations in their Rules of Criminal Procedure. However there are several states which have statutes that mandate much more information to be automatically given to defense counsel. There are multiple Wrongful Conviction Task Forces that recommend the same. See Jumpstart: Jailhouse Informant Discovery Requests Support Tailor your discovery requests to your case. Be specific. There are many examples in this section.

Please do not be concerned that many of the following practice guides and articles are older. Classic discovery and cross-examination preparation are timeless. Many of these presentations on cross examination include discovery checklists and ideas. For specific discovery checklists see Discovery and Motions Creative and Wishful.

Jumpstart: Jailhouse Informant Discovery Requests Support Stephanie Page

In Massachusetts the specific discovery obligations concerning informants of the prosecutor are laid out in Massachusetts Rules of Criminal Procedure. Mass. R. Crim. P. 14(a)(1)(A)(ix). Pretty limited to rewards, promises and inducements. We need to be more aggressive in our discovery requests. Several states and/or Wrongful Convictions Task Forces have mandated and/or recommended further mandatory discovery.

Use the following as support for more specific discovery requests especially for recantations. Go back to the Task Force reports contained in Wrongful Conviction Causes States Task Force Recommendations for further authority. The following are support for general discovery requests if an informant is involved in the case. More specific requests are included in the Motions Creative and Wishful section.

confidential source, C.I., plea agreement, 5k1 motion, cooperation agreement, and information & expense payment. While these two sets of terms mean the same thing, the terms used to describe the informant and his "reward" may well control the way they are thought of and thus the considerations given to them, by the jury. ...”

defendant/targets, witnesses culpability and criminal history, hearings, etc.

Jumpstart: Cross-examination Expectation of Rewards and Promises – When None are Expressly Made

What do you do when the snitch and prosecutor say that no promises have been made to the snitch in exchange for his testimony? The question is if the perception of the witness is that he is getting a benefit or saving himself from being charged, even if no official offer is ever made, is this fair game for cross-exam? YES. You still have the right to cross examine the snitch about his/her hope/expectation for favorable treatment. Practical tips by Cathleen Bennett and Stephanie Page

I have transcribed my hand written notes of this lecture of Marty’s. Over the next 25 years or so I referred to it often. The main points were and still are: (1) thorough and relentless preparation either through formal or informal discovery and investigation; (2) Picture painting: drawing out through the words of the witness what life is like and what will be lost if the witness does not help the government; (3) that the witness will do and say anything in order to ensure his freedom. Cross Examining the Accomplice Witness Brodsky Harris

“As a group, the seven accomplice witnesses in the racketeering trial of reputed mobster John Gotti and six codefendants could not have been more reprehensible. Collectively, these career criminals had been convicted of nearly 70 different crimes, ranging from bank robbery and car theft to drug trafficking and murder. On cross-examination, each confessed to a life of crime, to lying and cheating when it suited some criminal purpose. The accomplices’ testimony against the Gotti defendants was devastating, and painted a picture of heinous and violent crime. Nevertheless, in a verdict that stunned seasoned court watchers, the jury acquitted all defendants of all counts. Many believe that the government’s witnesses were simply too tainted by crime to be credited.”

MOTIONS CREATIVE and WISHFUL

GOALS: What better way to deal with this type of unreliable and cause for wrongful convictions than to try to keep the witness from being created at all – at least in the context of a jailhouse informant? (see Jumpstart Motion to Preclude Creation of Jailhouse Informant Testimony Support) If unsuccessful then why not file a motion to have all future interviews with the informant recorded (see Jumpstart Taskforces Recommend Audio or Video Recording of Informant Statements); a motion to exclude or suppress; to exclude because there is no corroboration of what the witness says (see Jumpstart States That Require Corroboration Informant Testimony); ask for a pretrial reliability hearing (see Jumpstart States or Taskforces That Require or Recommend Informant Reliability Hearings)? File a motion for a Daubert hearing; a motion to present your own expert on the unreliability of such a witness; an expert on why cross examination and jury instructions are no cure for this type of witness (see Jumpstart: Informant Testimony Effect on Jurors Cross Examination And Instructions Are Not Enough). Impossible? No. You will find support for these and more in the following Motions. See also WRONGFUL CONVICTION CAUSES STATES TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATIONS and LAW REVIEWS AND STUDIES RE: UNRELIABILITY OF SNITCH TESTIMONY.

Please do not be concerned that many of the following motions are dated. The requests are timeless and limited by the facts in your case and your creativity. Make sure that all cases are shepardized and/or all protocols/guidelines are updated. See Wrongful Conviction Causes States Task Force Recommendations Section for further support.

Massachusetts Last Minute Notice of Informant Testimony

The following motion, along with a Motion for Relief to Exclude Informant Last Minute Witness and Affidavit, were filed and heard in a murder case where the prosecutor gave notice of the intent to use a jailhouse informant at the final pretrial conference. We were lucky. We were successful in excluding the witness’s testimony – not for the right reasons mind you; but because the court did not want to give a continuance. It was important that we had made repeated requests for this type of discovery beginning from the pretrial conference on.

Massachusetts Motion for Disclosure of Informant File Luke Ryan
Federal Discovery Request Paid Informant Karnig Boyajian 1995

The case in question provided dramatic result since the government ended up voluntarily dismissing the case prior to trial apparently unwilling to respond to the questions. The two informants involved had received over $350,000 in fees baiting (trolling) for potential defendants to buttress their own ongoing lucrative formal “employment” by the DEA, as well as other benefits to them regarding passes on past criminal conduct which I had learned about in my own investigation.

The motion is obviously old and the citations could be more current, but the questions regarding personal benefits, rewards and inducements, to include their filing of tax returns on monies received, or any assistance given to them or their family members concerning immigrations issues, and other similarly related issues addressed in the motion (some yellow highlighted), might well form part of a core list of questions that could asked a snitch at trial.

CLOSINGS

I have included potions of several closings that deal with paid informants, codefendants who have cut deals in exchange for their testimony against the defendant and jailhouse stranger informants.

Plea Deal Witness System Closing Marty Weinberg: The Witness System

“During my opening, which seems like it was months ago, I talked to you about the architecture, the structure of the witness reward system. I told you then that the way the system operates-and it was proven out witness after witness-is that they are charged with and often sentenced under the narcotics statutes to huge terms of imprisonment. Life. 30 years. 20 years. Guidelines of 25 to life. In this case, Mr. Isern was facing a huge sentence. A life-threatening sentence. And that these sentences must be served. It is not like the state system where you get out in a fraction of what you get. …”

James “Whitey” Bulger

“From 1972 to 2000, James “Whitey” Bulger was allegedly a leading member of a criminal organization — initially the Winter Hill Gang and later the Bulger Group — that earned money through drug trafficking, extortion, loansharking and bookmaking. Bulger and Stephen Flemmi allegedly killed and assaulted people to protect their organization and fostered relationships with law enforcement officials to get confidential information about investigations and cooperating informants and witnesses. Bulger is charged with participating in 33 criminal acts, including 19 murders, a half dozen extortions — including the hostile takeover of a South Boston liquor store — and forcing drug dealers, bookmakers, loansharks and businessmen to pay rent or tribute to his organization.”

Plea Deal Bulger Closing Hank Brennan

“About an hour ago, Mr. Wyshak was telling you about the fact that some of the most dangerous murderers in the history of Boston were walking the streets. John Martorano admitted to killing at least 20 people, shooting most of them in the back of the head. Kevin Weeks, Pat Nee, James Martorano. He talked about how vicious and violent they were on the streets of Boston. And you have to sit there and ask yourself: Why are they still walking the streets? If they're so vicious and violent and our government knows about it, why are they out there right now? When you go home and decide to go shopping and go to Stop & Shop and get something to eat, you have to worry about turning around and having these men in the aisle next to you. …”

Plea Deal Bulger Closing Jay Carney

“… What is really going on here? And you probably don't hear lawyers talking this bluntly, but this, I submit to you, is what goes on: The government is buying the testimony of these witnesses. Sounds pretty awful to put it that way, doesn't it? The government is buying their testimony. The witnesses are selling their testimony to the government. The currency that's used here: How much freedom is the person going to get? The currency is the power of the government to keep someone locked up in a cell surrounded by four concrete walls, topped by barbed wire, and that's where the person lives, in a prison. And what the government can pay an individual is the individual's freedom. That's what they buy the testimony with. They buy it, and the witnesses sell it.”

Plea Deal Closing Portion Larry Tipton

This portion of the argument dealing with the plea deal, what the witness had to lose and inconsistencies gives a sense of a dramatic presentation.

Plea Deal Jailhouse Informants Closing Max Stern - Commonwealth v. Lewin.

This was a highly publicized trial where the defendant was charged with shooting a Boston Police Officer. Maz Stern and Patty Garin did incredible work that changed the search warrant universe and Albert Lewin’s life. In addition to the Not Guilty verdict they exposed the use of a fictional informant that the police used in search warrants. See prior SJC decision at 405 Mass. 566 (1989) (reversing dismissal of indictment and remanding for trial).

http://masscases.com/cases/sjc/405/405mass566.html
The following portions of Max’s closing deal with three witnesses who received deals in exchange for their testimony. One was present at the time of the shooting. The other two were stranger jailhouse informants. The entire closing can be located at Closings Max Stern.

CoDefendant Plea Deal Closing Milly Whatley

This closing done by Millie Whatley deals with a codefendant [Frank the rat] who is in custody and while in custody recruits a second jailhouse informant [the second rat], who testify against the defendant in exchange for a deal. The entire closing can be located at Closings Milly Whatley.

Jailhouse Informant Closing Argument Stephanie Page Larry Tipton

This is a part of a closing argument in a murder case that deals with a jailhouse informant. The prosecutor alleged that the defendant [XX] met a total stranger [QQ] in a holding cell at the Shattuck hospital and decided to confess to the murder – after having maintained his silence for almost two years. Through discovery, investigation and a motion hearing on the reliability of the jailhouse informant we learned that the informant had a long standing relationship with the State Police and had given information in the past that he greatly benefited from. The Motion hearing and Trial testimony transcripts are included in the Transcript folder. [See Jailhouse Informant MTS Page; Jailhouse Informant MTS State Police Sargent Relationship with IT; Jailhouse Informant Trial Page] The entire closing can be located at Closing Page Tipton.

Plea Deal Closing by Albert Krieger: Credibility of Witnesses

"Now there is no reason why you wouldn't trust me. I have told you what the circumstances are. So to demonstrate that you trust me, why don't you give me your car or give me your house or give me something of enormous value and personal value to you. And I realize I should pay for it, but don't worry, I will pay you maybe next year, maybe 10 years from now. I will pay you. Don't worry."

JURY INSTRUCTIONS – Limiting and Final

Goals: Most jurisdictions do not require an instruction for an informant’s testimony to be corroborated while corroboration is required for accessory testimony. Why is that? There are several states that mandate corroboration and Task Forces that recommendation instructions to include corroboration. Most states have general cautionary instructions that this type of witness should be scrutinized with care. But is that enough? See Jumpstart: States or Taskforces That Require or Recommend Corroboration of Informant Testimony. Why not submit something like the instruction that is mandated in South Wales, Australia that tells the jury about specific influences, for example the toll prison life might take on an informant? See Judicial Commission of New South Wales.

“People like [name of prison informer] are also affected by the standards and culture of prison society, where respect for the law, and telling the truth, may not be valued in the same way as would be the case outside prison. In prison there is often not a lot for prisoners to do to occupy their time and they live very close to each other. It is easy in those circumstances for one prisoner to develop a grudge against another over something that would seem quite trivial to someone outside jail. “

WRONGFUL CONVICTION CAUSES STATES TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATIONS

Goal: The following are great resources for data, case law and arguments to support discovery requests, motions and jury instructions. Use them.

After the Innocence Projects’ DNA exonerations became known many states commissioned Task Forces or Commissions to study the causes of wrongful convictions. One of the main causes was the use of Jailhouse Informant testimony. After lengthy hearings recommendations for reliability hearings and/or corroboration were made if the government intended to use this type of witness. Even though most of these dealt with death penalty cases the reasoning behind the recommendations is the same for non-death cases. These can be used in support of the need for not only discovery requests but Motions for Reliability Hearings and either limiting or final jury instructions. Start your motion with: “... no person should lose liberty or life based solely on the testimony of such a witness.” (ABA Informant Use Recommendations 2005)

California Report Recommendations re Informant Testimony 2006

Recommends (3) recording of all interviews with in custody informants and (4) The corroboration of any testimony of an in-custody informant by evidence which independently tends to connect the defendant with the crime, special circumstance or circumstance in aggravation to which the informant testifies.

Florida Innocence Commission Final Report

VIIA: Informant and Jailhouse Snitches
“The Florida Supreme Court . . . finally has changed the rules of evidence. Beginning this month, prosecutors now are required to disclose both a summary of the jailhouse informant’s criminal history and just what kind of deal a snitch will be getting in return for testimony. And now, jurors will hear about prior cases that relied on testimony from that particular informant. The justices ordered new restrictions on the much abused informant testimony, because snitches, the court noted, "constitute the basis for many wrongful convictions."

Neuschatz, Lawson, Swanner and Meissner American Psychological Association 2007

Innocence Project Data

This site is a good beginning for statistics and data. Should be checked for updated information. “In 18% of wrongful conviction cases overturned through DNA testing, an informant testified against the defendant at the original trial. Often, statements from people with incentives to testify — particularly incentives that are not disclosed to the jury — are the central evidence in convicting an innocent person. . . .”

Jailhouse Informants Robert Bloom ABA 2003

Recommends exclusion and pretrial reliability hearing.

States should adopt corroboration requirements for jailhouse snitches to mitigate the inherent risks incentivised witness testimony carries.

Recommends pretrial reliability hearing

Judicial Gatekeeping Of Police Generated Witnesses Thompson 2012
“... the Article argues that trial courts should conduct pretrial reliability hearings for police-generated witness testimony. ... Informants may be psychologically vulnerable to police pressure due to a variety of conditions similar to those observed in the context of interrogations. ... The question would be whether the incentives offered by law enforcement were so great as to create an unacceptable likelihood that any person would be tempted to commit perjury to gain the benefit or avoid the punishment. ... Laboratory protocols guide the scientist, and standardized protocols can guide law enforcement in gathering and preserving eyewitness identification evidence, confessions during custodial interrogations, and the use of police informants.”

NIJ Policing and Wrongful Convictions 2014

“All case-relevant discussions with informants should be electronically recorded, and copies of the recordings should be given to the defense. Because most of these conversations occur in a custodial setting, this would not be a major burden for police departments, especially in light of the increased use of recording interrogations.”

“By definition, a jailhouse informant is an inmate, usually awaiting trial or sentencing, who claims to have been the recipient of an admission made by another prisoner awaiting trial, and who agrees to testify against that prisoner in a court of law, usually in exchange for some benefit. ...”

Prosecuting the Informant Culture Andrew Taslitz Michigan Law Review 2011

“Alexandra Natapoff,' in her outstanding new book, Snitching: Criminal Informants and the Erosion of American Justice, makes a compelling case for reform of the system by which we regulate police use of criminal informants. Indeed, as other writers have discussed, law enforcement's overreliance on such informants has led to a "snitching culture" in which informant snitching replaces other forms of law enforcement investigation ...Yet snitches, especially jailhouse snitches, are notoriously unreliable.”

This Comment proposes that all jurisdictions reclassify snitch testimony as circumstantial evidence. “Fabricated testimony by informants often plays an important role in convictions of the innocent. In this article, I examine the particularly problematic situation of defendants who are innocent of the particular crime charged but are not strangers to crime. As to such defendants, potential informants abound among crime associates, and they have a ready story line that authorities are preconditioned to accept. Independent proof, which could be an antidote, will predictably be lacking. ...”

“Paradoxically, the more a witness’s fate depends on the success of the prosecution, the more resistant the witness will be to cross-examination. “Are prosecutors at fault for reaching out to witnesses whose testimony sounds too good to be true when it fills in the gaps that otherwise would likely derail the prosecution’s case? This essay addresses the following questions: Does such conduct clearly violate prosecutorial ethical obligations when all impeachable material possessed by the government is disclosed? Is an ethical violation sufficient to obtain a reversal of the defendant’s conviction by a jury that chooses to believe the testimony of these impeachable witnesses? Assuming that answer is no, is it beneficial to clearly label the presentation of such testimony as ethically problematic and to propose clarifying ethical rules to specifically address such conduct?”

Toward A New Vision Of Informants: A History Of Abuses And Suggestions For Reform Clifford S. Zimmerman Hastings Constitutional Law Quarterly 1994

“This article first presents a history of informant misconduct and mishandling by law enforcement officials. ... This article proposes a framework that builds on established constitutional rights and incorporates the nature of the informant-handler and informant-state relationships. The key to incorporating the informant relationship is to apply a rebuttable presumption that informant conduct is state action (as required by the Fourteenth Amendment) and action under color of law (in accord with s 1983). This presumption will instill responsibility in law enforcement agencies for their choice in using informants.”

James “Whitey” Bulger Transcripts Jay Carney and Hank Brennan

“From 1972 to 2000, James “Whitey” Bulger was allegedly a leading member of a criminal organization — initially the Winter Hill Gang and later the Bulger Group — that earned money through drug trafficking, extortion, loansharking and bookmaking. Bulger and Stephen Flemmi allegedly killed and assaulted people to protect their organization and fostered relationships with law enforcement officials to get confidential information about investigations and cooperating informants and witnesses. Bulger is charged with participating in 33 criminal acts, including 19 murders, a half dozen extortions — including the hostile takeover of a South Boston liquor store — and forcing drug dealers, bookmakers, loansharks and businessmen to pay rent or tribute to his organization.” http://www.bostonglobe.com/2013/06/12/bulger-trial-preview/Bk2rBy13wzT1WvR6UMGkJK/story.html#charges-page

Bulger associate, confessed hitman and government witness: “A hitman-turned-government witness who began cooperating with the government in 1998 after learning that his longtime associates and fellow Winter Hill Gang members, Flemmi and Bulger, were FBI informants. Martorano was at the center of much of the Winter Hill Gang’s dirty work in the 1970s. The Milton native admitted to committing 20 murders between 1965 and 1982, some allegedly at the direction of Bulger and Flemmi -- or with the gangsters’ direct participation. Martorano served 12 years and two months in prison for the murders and became a free man in March 2007. He wrote a book with Howie Carr about his life story.”

“Bulger's "surrogate son" and sidekick beginning in the 1980s: A South Boston native and loyal tough guy whom Bulger groomed as his successor and treated like a son. Weeks began cooperating with investigators in early 2000 after his own racketeering indictment. During the 1980s, Weeks operated several of the Southie convenience stores and liquor marts that served as fronts for the Bulger organization. Weeks received "rent" payments from loan sharks and bookmakers, allegedly to insulate Bulger from the transactions, and also helped shake down local crooks and businessmen behind on their debts to the gang. Following Bulger's disappearance in 1995, Weeks acted as "operational chief" of the Bulger organization, taking orders from the fugitive gangster over the phone and delivering fake identification to him during clandestine meetings in Chicago and New York. After learning that Bulger and Flemmi had been FBI informants, Weeks led investigators to secret graves containing the remains of some of Bulger’s alleged victims. He served five years for being an accessory to five murders and wrote a book about his exploits with Bulger.”

Bulger’s friend and righthand man: “A gangster and longtime FBI informant who teamed up with Bulger in the 1970s while both were members of the Winter Hill Gang. Flemmi served as Bulger’s front man, collecting money from bookies and inspiring fear in those who didn't pay their debts on time. He was one of Bulger’s closest associates and is expected to be the government’s key witness against his former friend. Flemmi pleaded guilty to participating in 10 murders with Bulger under a deal that spared him the death penalty but sent him to prison for life.”

Crooked FBI John Morris – Cross Hank Brennan

FBI special agent (Ret.): “A corrupt FBI supervisor who admitted to pocketing bribes from Bulger and Flemmi and leaking information to them in the 1980s. Morris never served a day in jail because he was granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for his cooperation. He had supervised the FBI’s organized crime squad in Boston, including John J. Connolly Jr., who was the FBI handler of Bulger and Flemmi. Morris, Connolly, and other agents wined and dined with the two gangster informants, and exchanged gifts with the pair while protecting them from prosecution.”

U.S. v. Owens Transcripts

These are Robert Sheketoff's and Miriam Conrad's crosses of Devone Robinson, Keillan Smith and Kenneth Allen (Sheketoff) and Anthony Lewis (Conrad): accomplices in drug activity and murder with the defendant. Was alleged that the defendant confessed to the killing of Rodney Belle. Covers last minute discovery issues, plea agreements, past and pending cases, timelines with allegations and contacts with prosecutors and law enforcement.

“... the government's allegation that, from 1988 to 1995, Owens ran a large-scale drug enterprise that obtained cocaine from suppliers in New York and Florida for distribution in Massachusetts. The government also accused Owens of possessing numerous handguns, resorting to violence and threats of violence to protect his drug interests, and of the murder of one Rodney Belle, who had double-crossed him in a drug deal ...” ... Owens, a well-known New England cocaine czar at the time of the murder, thought Bell had set him up to have his drugs stolen.”

Accomplice Drug Snitch Buyer Transcript Shaffer

“This contains excerpts from a cross-examination by attorney Kent Schaffer of Bires and Schaffer, Houston, Texas that demonstrates how a planned, balanced approach to the cross-examination of the Informant can yield impressive results. Schaffer's client was charged with participating in a conspiracy to distribute cocaine, and was allegedly the individual who oversaw the importation of the cocaine into the United States. The government's key witness was an informant who had engaged in several transactions with Schaffer's client, but whose credibility was virtually negligible. Schaffer's intent in conducting the cross was to lock the witness in on a number of important points, and then argue those points to the jury as reasons why the witness' story could not be believed. Schaffer avoided a confrontational or sarcastic tone with the witness, and instead demonstrated a patient, thorough approach to exploring the history of the witness' drug dealing and cooperation with federal authorities. We have digested Schaffer's cross of the witness below, and prefaced each portion of the transcript with the relevant point that Schaffer was seeking to make with the witness. The transcribed portions demonstrate how he scored points with the witness and then moved on to others, leaving the jury to concentrate more on the witness' own legal baggage and less on his knowledge of the illegal activities of the defendants who were on trial.”

No one could cross examine this type of witness better than Ritchie Egbert. Fearless, relentless and detailed. “Robert A. Urciuoli was federally indicted in 2006 along with two other hospital executives for buying the “honest services” of Celona, a once-powerful North Providence, Rhode Island legislator, to benefit the hospital. The board of trustees fired Urciuoli “for cause” days after his indictment.

Jurors in 2006 convicted Urciuoli ... , senior vice president at Roger Williams, after a trial in which Celona delivered bumbling testimony as the government’s star witness.”

CoDefendant Testifies Against D Cross Promises and Rewards Transcript Roger Witkin John Ruby

This ... “cross examination is excerpted from a murder trial in Suffolk Superior Court in which the defendant is alleged to have shot and killed a 78-year-old furrier, at approximately 9:30 a.m., in his fur shop across the street from the Park Street subway station. The defendant was one of four participants in a planned armed robbery. The defendant and the key Commonwealth witness against him were actually scheduled to go to trial together when the Commonwealth offered a deal to the witness on the eve of trial to testify against the defendant. Prior to that, the defendant and the witness had spent approximately ten months together at the Suffolk County Jail awaiting trial. The cross examination begins with the participants having fled the scene, abandoning their automobile near the Public Garden, and taking a taxi to the South End. (The cross examination skips various sections and includes only those pages which have to do with promises, rewards, and inducements to the witness.)”

Cooperating Witness Cross Exam Gooch James Connell

“Defense counsel James G. Connell conducts a thorough cross-examination of a government cooperating witness in a federal drug conspiracy case. As is often the case with federal prosecutions, the Government relies primarily on testimony from former co-defendants or associates of the accused who are being offered substantial leniency in exchange for testifying against the defendant. Of note, as is often the case, is that the government cooperator does not want to admit that is being virtually guaranteed leniency, or that it matters to him if the accused is convicted. He essentially pretends to believe that he has no idea what sentence he will receive. The cross examination exposes, as much as possible, the fact that the government cooperator actually knows he will be heavily rewarded by the prosecutors for helping them to secure a conviction.” Crosses about prison life.

Cooperating Witness Cross Mills Jay Carney

This is a transcript from a Federal trial by Jay Carney. His client was an alleged hit man for a large crack cocaine ring, and was facing multiple murders. This trial focused on the murder of a front-seat passenger sitting in the “cream-colored Bentley” of Whitney Houston, driven by her then husband, Bobby Brown, when he was visiting his old stomping grounds at the Orchard Park projects. This is the cross of the sixth cooperating witness, who was the kingpin of the drug conspiracy. Every top level guy had cut a deal. The cross is suspended at the end of the day, a Thursday before a long weekend. That weekend, the prosecutor called Jay and offered to reduce the charge from murder to conspiracy to commit an assault and illegal use of a telephone, and wrap up all pending Federal and expected State murder charges into one package, along with the client’s getting credit for five years he served on a Federal gun charge that had been reversed. This is an excellent example of exposing the snitch for the liar that he is.

Cooperating Witness Smith Lisa Kavanaugh

Smith was also impeached with his extensive criminal record, as well as the fact that he was testifying pursuant to a cooperation agreement whereby he stood to benefit in two separate Middlesex Superior Court cases: a witness intimidation case, in which he was charged as a habitual offender and faced a mandatory term of ten years, and a drug case, in which he faced an additional mandatory five year term. The jury learned that Smith did not become a cooperating witness until after he had been detained on a $75,000 cash bail for over a year awaiting trial on witness intimidation charges (Tr. 3/366, 383-384, 411), and that as a result of his earlier testimony against Benzan in Middlesex Superior Court, he had already earned his release from jail on personal recognizance.

Cooperating Witness US v. Jeffers Leibig

This transcript contains the direct and cross of a government cooperator in a federal case where the defendant is alleged to have taken part in a scam to steal fuel from the US Army in Iraq. The witness was the defendant's boss at a contracting company that worked in Iraq. His plea deal ultimately resulted in his being sentenced to less time to serve than the defendant, who earned one tenth the amount of money at the company and operated only as a driver's escort. Of note is the witness' refusal to admit he expects a sentencing reduction for his testimony, and his explanation of why his testimony directly conflicts with a prior sworn statement he made in front of a different Judge. (See page 200-201). Before becoming a cooperating witness, he had maintained the defendant had no direct knowledge of the scam.

Jailhouse Informant

“‘This is a good example of weaving motives to lie and favors obtained from the government given the difficulty of being the second defense lawyer to cross. There were six defendants charged with a variety of federal offenses related to a string of bank and armored car robberies that took place between 1990 and 1996. Connolly was a longtime friend of two of the defendants and an acquaintance to the others.’”
